Country Media, the parent operating company to a dozen local newspapers located in California and Oregon, has partnered with Miami-based Global Listings, the world's largest online real estate listings search engine to power their 11 newspaper websites with over 3+ million property listings from 107 different countries.

As part of the new property listings content syndication partnership, Global Listings will now provide all 11 newspaper sites with a "white-label" real estate listing search engine interface, over 3 million active property listings of searchable content, and a fully automated and e-commerce driven self-posting property listings advertising solution.

David Thornberry, Country Media's corporate director of revenue commented, "We are excited to be partnering with Global Listings to provide not only a great new service and options in real estate, but also interesting details about properties worldwide."

Global Listings founder and CEO Michael Gerrity said, "We are honored to be working with Country Media to provide all their newspapers with our online real estate listings search engine interface and worldwide property listings content. We also look forward to further helping Country Media's 11 newspapers' own online audiences connect with properties locally or worldwide that are best suited for their own needs, and providing them the simple and cost-effective option to post their own property listings direct to each newspaper's website."
