

Support Howland Hill Outdoor School this #GivingTuesday and Spark a Lifelong Love of Nature

December 7, 2024

CRESCENT CITY, CA – This #GivingTuesday (December 3, 2024), join Redwood Parks Conservancy (RPC) in sparking a lifelong love of the outdoors by supporting a child's visit to Howland Hill Outdoor School within Redwood National and State Parks.

Since 1979, Howland Hill Outdoor School has provided hands-on, immersive experiences in the iconic redwood forests, giving children the opportunity to connect with nature in meaningful ways. Studies consistently show the positive impact of outdoor education on mental and physical health, as well as academic achievement. By sponsoring a child's visit, donors can help continue to inspire and transform lives, one student at a time.

Ways to Make an Impact:

- $40 sponsors a one-day immersive experience for one student.
- $90 provides an overnight adventure for a deeper connection to nature.
- $500 funds a full day for a group of 12 students, inspiring exploration and teamwork.
- $1,000 funds a full day for a class of 25 students, fostering shared learning and discovery.

Contributions ensure that children can experience the wonders of the redwoods and form a lasting bond with the natural world.

About Howland Hill Outdoor School

Howland Hill Outdoor School (HHOS) offers curriculum-based programs for students of all ages. In the spring, the school hosts overnight stays for 4th graders in its sleeping cabins, while summer sessions welcome Pre-K through 5th grade students for four-week programs. In the fall, day programs serve 6th and 2nd graders, and additional in-class programs are planned for winter to reach even more students.

HHOS also accommodates special requests for personalized programs. For instance, this year a 1st-grade teacher requested a bat-themed program, leading to a customized spring session. The school also participates in community events and has provided programs for children at local community centers during spring break.
