
Norman Newton Folkenberg

February 20, 2024

Norman Newton Folkenberg, known fondly to friends and family as Norman, passed away peacefully of natural causes on January 25, 2024, in Crescent City, California. Born on October 6, 1934, in the lush landscapes of Oregon, Norman's life was a tapestry of hard work, creativity, and the warm embrace of family life. He was a beloved father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and uncle, whose legacy of love and kindness will be cherished by all who knew him.

Norman's early years were spent working in the mills of California, where he learned the value of dedication and perseverance. He later transitioned to a career as a fire lookout, a role he passionately embraced until his well-earned retirement. The solitude and beauty of the natural world were a constant source of inspiration for Norman, and his dedication to preserving it was evident in his diligent work.

Beyond his professional life, Norman was a man of many interests and talents. Reading was a favored pastime, allowing him to explore worlds beyond his own. Painting and woodworking were not just hobbies but expressions of his deep-seated creativity, resulting in beautiful pieces that were often gifted to loved ones. Western movies were another joy, with their tales of adventure and heroism reflecting the bold spirit Norman carried within himself.

Norman's heart, however, was most fulfilled in the company of his family. He was the cherished husband of the late Emma Jean Folkenberg, and together they built a life rich with love and laughter. His children, Sherri Lewis, Douglas Folkenberg, Yvette Deere, and David Folkenberg were the pride of his life, and he instilled in them the values of integrity, compassion, and the importance of family bonds. The joy of Norman's life multiplied with the arrival of each grandchild and great-grandchild, as he watched his legacy beautifully unfold through the generations.

Holidays were a particular delight for Norman, where the gathering of family, the sharing of stories, and the enjoyment of good food – which he always insisted was one of life's greatest pleasures – made for cherished memories. His presence at these family celebrations was as essential as the festive meals he so enjoyed, and his absence will be deeply felt during these times.

Norman's life was a testament to the quiet strength and resilience of a man who faced life's challenges with grace and who found happiness in the simple pleasures of life. He was a pillar in his community, a friend to many, and a guiding light to his family. His wise counsel, gentle humor, and the unwavering love he had for his family will be profoundly missed. Norman's passing marks the end of an era, but his spirit will continue to live on in the hearts of those he touched.

He leaves behind not only his children and their spouses but also a host of grandchildren, great-grandchildren, nieces, and nephews, all of whom will carry forward the lessons of love, family, and resilience that Norman embodied. As we bid farewell to Norman Newton Folkenberg, we celebrate a life well-lived, a journey well-traveled, and a man well-loved. His was a life that exemplified the beauty of simplicity, the strength of character, and the joy of togetherness. While Norman may have left this earthly realm, the memories he created, the wisdom he shared, and the love he gave will forever be woven into the fabric of his family's history. Rest in peace, Norman. Your story lives on through the many lives you've touched, and your memory will continue to inspire us all to live with the same kindness, passion, and love for family that you so effortlessly displayed.
