

Letter: Police and SeaCruise

October 16, 2024

I want to express my disappointment with how our local law enforcement handled the SeaCruise show this year. As an event that celebrates car enthusiasts, it's no surprise that some participants might want to show off a little. After all, that's part of the fun of the show.

However, it was frustrating to see city cops handing out tickets to cars that were simply revving their engines or making small displays of their vehicles' power. These drivers weren't causing harm, and they were there to enjoy the event like everyone else. Instead of fostering a positive, welcoming environment, the heavy-handed ticketing dampened the spirit of the show.

I understand the need for safety and control, but there should be a balance, especially at an event like like SeaCruise. Hopefully, in the future, the city can find a better way to support this community event without being so quick to ticket drivers who are simply trying to join in the excitement.
