

Letter: A critical junction

October 24, 2023

Our nation is at a critical juncture, demanding an immediate response to the pervasive issue of corruption within our political system. It is imperative that we enact an all-encompassing anti-corruption legislation package that addresses key areas of concern.

First and foremost, a ban on insider trading for Congresspersons is essential to uphold ethical standards and ensure the public's faith in our democratic processes. Additionally, lobbying from corporate interests must be prohibited to prevent undue influence on policy decisions.

To maintain a truly representative government, implementing term limits for both Congress and Judgeships is vital. This will promote fresh perspectives and discourage the entrenchment of power. Moreover, it is crucial to outlaw external interests, material or monetary gifts, to elected officials and judges, safeguarding their impartiality and the integrity of our democracy.

Furthermore, comprehensive campaign finance reform is essential to level the playing field and prevent the undue influence of money in politics. Only through these reforms can we restore public trust, strengthen democratic values, and build a brighter future for our great nation.

Terry Dean Brooks

Crescent City

